

Civic learning starts with you

Independent learning resource - not official curriculum

For teachers, students and community learning groups

A flexible 30-40 minute activity. Facilitators should adapt reading and writing tasks to learners; younger learners may answer orally or draw.

Goal: connect a public issue with a reliable source and a respectful discussion.

1 Notice your community | 5 minutes

Name one shared need in your community, such as a clean public space or a safe route to school. Who is affected? Avoid naming or blaming individuals.

2 Read and find evidence | 10 minutes

Choose a short reading about Liberia from the hub. Write one thing you learned and the title or source that supports it. Separate facts from opinions.

3 Discuss respectfully | 10 minutes

How does the reading relate to the shared need? Listen without interrupting. What more would you need to know before proposing an action?

Facilitator tip: provide the reading in print before the lesson if internet access is limited. Do not require learners to have a phone or buy data.

Check sources. Take thoughtful action.

4 Make a small, practical proposal | 5-10 minutes

Suggest one safe, peaceful step your class or group could take. Explain who should be consulted first. Children should work with a trusted adult.

A quick source-checking checklist

- ☐ Who published it, and can you find the original?
- ☐ When was it published or updated?
- ☐ Does the source support the claim, including any exceptions?
- ☐ Can another reliable source confirm it?
- ☐ If unsure, say what is uncertain instead of guessing.

Before you finish

Name one new fact, one unanswered question and one way to check it. Do not share personal details or photographs without appropriate permission.
